THAT TIRED FEELING.

I'm tired of infant prodigies,
Now, tell me, are not you?
I'm tired of weather prophecies
That always miss their cue.
I'm tired of buying goods marked down,
Way down their cost below;
Of building lots outskirting town
That double value so.

I'm tired of ladies who remain
Unmated from sheer choice;
Of maids who sing, yet plead and feign
To have indeed no voice;
Of girls who never novels buy,
So classical are they;
Of youth just home from college high,
Who knows it all—his way.

I'm tired (oh, have you never been?)
Of folks reminding me
Their shoes are one size larger than
They really ought to be;
Of would be poets seeking fame
By harping "gentle spring."
Upon this list stands first the name
Attached to this crude fling.

I'm tired of seeing ballet twirls
By girls whose sons can vote;
Of seeing fluffy, golden curls
That peroxide denote;
Of clerks who know before I ask
The very thing I want;
Of would be friends who 'neath the mask
Of bluntness hurl the taunt.

I'm tired of fatal accident
By gun unloaded quite;
Of tonic, "surely heaven sent,"
That puts all ills to flight;
Of drivers and of motormen
Who never look my way;
Of him who borrows just a ten
And quite forgets to pay.

I'm tired of hearing old folks prate
O'er days perfection fraught;
Of never hearing, lose or take,
Of raffle tickets bought;
Of all these things and many more
I'm tired as tired can be,
And as all rhymsters are a bore
I know you're tired of me.

A TRICYCLE FOR TWO

A street organ was playing "A Bicycle Made For Two," and as we listened sadly and wondered how long England would be permitted to be the refuge of anarchists and organ grinders the colonel remarked to no one in particular: "A bicycle made for two may do well enough in this country, but if you Britishers had ever seen Professor Van Wagener's tricycle made for two you would never think of singing about any kind of bicycle.

"I think I was telling you the other day," continued the colonel, "about Professor Van Wagener, the great electrical sharp, who used to live next door to me in New Berlinopolisville. A mighty clever man he was in many other directions than that of electricity. He was always inventing something. I have known that man to get up at 4 o'clock on a winter's morning and invent straight along till noon. Show him a piece of machinery, I don't care what it might be, and he would instantly go to work to improve it.

"I had a reaping machine in my field, and one day the professor happened to see it. Nothing would satisfy him but to put an attachment to that machine so that it would gather the straw into bundles and tie them neatly around the middle with ropes which were to be twisted out of straw with a second attachment to the machine. He worked at that idea for several months until he got it to suit him. Then he built a brand new machine with his two attachments and took it into my field to exhibit it. He was so proud of it that he sent out written invitations to about all his acquaintances to come and see it, and he told me that this time he had made an invention that was going to make his fortune and give him a reputation that would lie over any other man's, except perhaps George Washington's.

"The machine was a big, clumsy looking affair and was run by a horse that had a sort of stall in about the middle of it, where he couldn't play any tricks and where the machine couldn't play any tricks on him. The professor had his wife with him and his wife's cousin, who was a very pretty girl, though I don't believe Van Wagener ever noticed that anything was pretty unless it was some sort of scientific apparatus. The horse was started up, and the machine began to reap and to tie up bundles of straw, just as the professor said it would do. His wife's cousin wanted to see just how the thing worked, so he took her alongside of the machine, and before they fairly knew what was the matter the machine had tied the professor and the girl into a bundle and tied them so tight that they could hardly breathe. Naturally the people who had been invited to see the machine work rushed up to help the professor and the young woman, and presently that machine had most of the leading citizens of New Berlinopolisville tied up in neat bundles and lying around on the ground calling for help, except such of them as had been wrapped round with straw and were too nearly suffocated to speak. The machine kept on its way, seeking for more citizens and more straw, until some man had sense enough to stop the horse and so put an end to the performance. There isn't any manner of doubt that it was a talented machine, but when the leading citizens had been set free they seemed very much prejudiced against it. Some of them were for killing the professor, and some of them were for killing the horse, but they finally compromised and arranged their differences by smashing the machine into scrap iron and informing the professor that if he ever calculated to build another one he had better dig his grave first and sit close to the edge of it. I can't say that I blame them very much, for when a man is violently tied up with some other man whom he doesn't particularly like or with some other man's wife, knowing all the time that the woman's husband is spry with his weapons and unwilling as a general rule to argue a matter until after he has got done shooting, it stands to reason that he won't feel particularly friendly to the machine that has done the tying. I never heard any more about that machine from the professor, and it's my belief that when his wife got him home she let him know that he couldn't be tied up in the same bundle with a good looking cousin without inviting the just indignation of a virtuous and devoted wife.

"Another time the professor was taking a drive with me in my buggy, and it struck him as a bright idea that the bit and reins ought to be superseded by electricity. So he goes to work and invents a new way of driving a horse by pressing buttons instead of pulling on the reins. He had wires running from the seat of his wagon to different parts of the horse. You pressed one button, and the horse got a shock on the right side of his face that made him turn to the left. You pressed another button, and a shock on the left cheek turned him to the right. A wire connecting with his tail was used to stir him up instead of a whip, and a strong current sent into his fore legs was expected to make him stop dead still whenever it was turned on. All these currents came from a battery under the seat of the wagon, and the buttons that turned them on were let into the seat on either side of the driver.

"Van Wagener took his wife out to drive in this new style of wagon as soon as he got it perfected, and to all appearances it worked very well. He stopped in front of Dr. Smith's drug store, which was our leading drug store at the time, though afterward the proprietor was crusaded by the Women's Christian Temperance union, who smashed all his whisky bottles and knocked out the heads of his whisky barrels and left nothing in his establishment except a few medicine bottles and a little perfumery. Well, as I was saying, the professor stopped in front of the drug store, and Mrs. Van Wagener climbed down and bought some mustard plasters or something of the sort and then climbed into the wagon again. She was a middling heavy woman, which was a little strange, considering how strict she was in matters of morality and religion, for your strict woman is nearly always more or less bony, and she sat down on the seat with considerable force and directly on the top of about half the electric buttons, she having forgot all about them. The horse couldn't quite understand the signals, but when he felt a current setting up his spine, and another in his left cheek, and another in his right cheek, he saw that as a matter of self respect he ought to kick that wagon to flinders, and accordingly he started in to do it. The professor yelled to him to whoa, and he turned on all his electricity at once, hoping to shock the horse into some sort of paralysis, but it didn't work. The horse just kicked the whole front of the wagon into smithereens, and when he struck the battery and spilt the acids over his legs he remembered that he had an engagement in the next county, and he started to keep it at a pace of about 30 miles an hour. It didn't much matter to the professor and his wife, who had been scattered all over the neighborhood when the horse's heels first struck the seat, but when they came to and Smith had plastered them up with brown paper and arnica Van Wagener remarked that in his opinion horses were played out, and that in this age electricity ought to be made to take the place of such a grossly unscientific animal."

The colonel paused and pulled his hat down over his eyes, as was his custom when he had finished speaking and desired to smoke in silence. He was reminded by Thompson that, however interesting his recollections of Professor Van Wagener might be, they had not yet included the promised account of the tricycle made for two.

"Beg your pardon, gentlemen," said the colonel. "I clean forgot about that. The truth is, when I get to remembering about the professor's inventions, there are so many of them that I generally forget the particular one I started out to tell about. It's the same way with this hyer village of London. I've started out half a dozen times to go to see the Tower, and I strike so many things that interest me that I have never yet got there. Take your cigar shops, for instance. Why, they are 50 years behind the age, and when I go into one I get talking with the proprietor and trying to show him the error of his ways, till first I know it's too late to go anywhere.

"But about this hyer tricycle. When bicycles and tricycles came to New Berlinopolisville, the professor was mightily interested in them. Not that he admired them, but because, as he said, they were unscientific. He demonstrated with not more than half a slateful of figures that it took more exertion to drive a bicycle a mile than it would take to run that mile with a man's own legs. There was no getting around his figures. They proved that a man weighing 140 pounds and driving an ordinary bicycle at the rate of 10 miles an hour consumed, say, 500 foot pounds of energy—if anybody knows what that means, and I don't much believe anybody does. Well, the same man could run a mile with the consumption of only 400 pounds, leaving a surplus of 100 pounds for the benefit of the poor. 'If these young fellows that I see on bicycles had any sense,' said Van Wagener, 'they would drive their machines by electricity and avoid the awful consumption of energy.' No sooner had this idea struck him than he proceeded to invent an electric engine for bicycles, and in the course of the summer he had his invention worked out to his own satisfaction.

"The engine and storage battery took up a good deal of space, and so the wise professor, instead of applying it to a bicycle, had built a big tricycle, with seats for two, and fitted his engine to that. He calculated that it would drive the machine for 12 hours at a speed of 15 miles on a level, and that it would carry two persons weighing in the aggregate 500 pounds with perfect ease. When the machine was all finished, the professor wheeled it out of the yard and down to a turn in the road where Mrs. Wagener couldn't see him and made ready for a start. You see, his wife was prejudiced against his inventions and always said that he should never try experiments with new inventions so long as she could prevent it. Just as the professor was climbing aboard the tricycle, Widow Dumfries comes along, and being young and full of spirits, besides being a mighty sociable sort of woman, she told Van Wagener that it looked mighty selfish for him to start out alone, and that if he wanted to be real accommodating he would give her a little ride on his machine. The professor never could say no, except to another scientific person, and so he told Mrs. Dumfries to get into the front seat and he would take her down to her house, which was about a quarter of a mile down the road.

"The machine went along all right and the professor worked his way cautiously along the main street with his brake on most of the time, but as soon as he got in the outskirts of the town he turned on the full current and let her whiz. The widow was delighted and said that she had never enjoyed anything half so much in all her life. Pretty soon the machine came to a middling steep descent in the road, and the professor started to shut off the current and put on his brake. But there was something wrong about his levers. He couldn't shut off the current to save his life, and when he put the brake hard on, hoping that it would stop the thing, the brake broke.

"They tell me that the tricycle went down that hill at about 60 miles an hour—that is, after it got well under headway, you understand. Nothing that Van Wagener could do had any effect in slowing it down. The engine was working for all it was worth, and she meant to keep on working according to contract. When the tricycle struck the level ground, she slowed down to about 18 miles an hour, for the professor had given her more power than he had intended to give her. There weren't any hills or any ascents worth mentioning for the machine to climb, for Berlinopolisville is about 600 feet above the lake, and the road that the professor had taken keeps descending all the way.

"When the professor found that he couldn't stop the tricycle, he was a pretty badly frightened man. He couldn't possibly throw himself off without mixing himself all up with the wheels and breaking most of his bones. Besides, he couldn't desert the widow in any such way as that. You may ask why he didn't turn the machine round and steer for home. The reason was that he couldn't possibly turn it at the speed it was running without capsizing the whole concern. The only thing he could possibly do was to keep in the middle of the road and let the machine run till the power was exhausted, which if he had made no mistake in his calculation wouldn't be less than 12 hours.

"Mrs. Dumfries enjoyed the thing at first, but after a little while she suspected that something was wrong. The professor told her that he was sorry to say that he couldn't stop the tricycle, but if she sat tight and they had middling good luck he calculated that they wouldn't come to any great harm. The widow wasn't easily frightened. She reflected that she had on her best pair of shoes and stockings and declared that if there was to be an accident she would have to make the best of it. The longer the ride lasted the less chance there seemed to be of running into anything, for the teams that the professor and Mrs. Dumfries did meet mostly went into the ditch on one side of the road or the other before the tricycle had a chance to run into them. The professor, being a kind hearted man and disliking profane language, was considerably troubled when he saw a horse and buggy, or maybe a pair of horses and loaded wagon pile up in the ditch and heard the remarks that the driver made—that is, in those cases where he was in a condition to make remarks, but he couldn't stop to explain or apologize.

"It was about 2 o'clock in the morn-

THE GREAT TIE-UP.

Owing to the stubbornness of both the Southern Pacific and the other big railway systems of the United States and their striking employees the great railroad tie-up is still on. This strike if continued much longer may lead to revolution and bloodshed. As it is the whole country is suffering in consequence. It seems proper that the matter should be settled by arbitration to the end that peace and quiet prevail and that justice be done to the people of our entire country.

City Trustees.

The Board of City Trustees met in regular monthly meeting last Thursday evening, instead of Wednesday, the same being a legal holiday.

Trustees Seipp, Schocken, Bulotti and Poppe were present and Trustee Ludeman absent.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The committee which was appointed at the last meeting to prepare plans for a city jail asked for further time.

Trustee Schocken called up ordinance No 46, and the same being read the second time was passed by the votes of Trustees Schocken, Bulotti and Poppe, and approved by the President of the Board. The object of this ordinance is to raise the license on circuses to $50 per day and to levy a tax of $2.00 a day on merry-go-rounds.

The resignation of John Ludeman as a Trustee of the Board was read by the Clerk and on motion of Trustee Schocken accepted.

Clerk Breitenbach submitted his report of the City's financial condition for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1894, which was referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Trustee Schocken the City Marshal was authorized to procure two pairs of handcuffs.

It was moved by Trustee Schocken and seconded by Trustee Bulotti that G. S. Harris be offered $3 per week for sprinkling the city's one half of the streets around the Plaza, and twice a week on First-street West from the Plaza to the depot.

Trustee Bulotti complained of the irregular line of the curbing on First-street West south of the Plaza and recommended that the curbing be made in a straight line from Harris' livery stable south to the ending point. The proposition was laid over until the next meeting of the Board.

The following bills were allowed and ordered paid:

Louis Breitenbach, labor, $10; J. E. Robin, salary and services, $19 50; Chas. McHarvey, blacksmithing, $1.50; Gustav Cornelius, labor, $4.00; G. H. H. Cornelius, supplies, 75c.; Louis Foutts, labor, $6.00.

The Board then adjourned.

Why They Advertise.

The man who conducts his business on the theory that it doesn't pay, and he can't afford to advertise sets up his judgment in opposition to that of all the best business men in the world. With a few years experience in conducting a small business on a few thousand dollars of capital he assumes to know more than thousands of men whose hourly transactions aggregate more than his do in a year, and who have made their millions by pursuing a course that he says doesn't pay.

If advertising doesn't pay, why is it that the most successful merchants of every town, large or small, are the heaviest advertisers? If advertising doesn't pay, who does the most business? If it doesn't pay to advertise, why do the heaviest business firms in the world spend millions in that way? Is it because they want to donate those millions of dollars to the newspaper and magazine publishers, or because they don't know as much about business as the six-for-a-dollar "store keeper" in a country town, who says money spent in advertising is thrown away or donated to the man to whom it is paid? Such talk is simply ridiculous, and it requires more than the average patience to discuss the proposition of whether advertising pays or not with that kind of a man. His complacent self-conceit in assuming that he knows more than the whole business world is laughable, and reminds us of the man who proved that the world doesn't revolve by placing a pumpkin on a stump and watching it all night.—Ex.

The Supervisors.

The following Road Commissioners' bills have been allowed by the Supervisors at the present session of the Board:

J. A. Meade, Washington, $47; Mendocino, $57. John Sales, Bloomfield, $43.25; Sebastopol, $125.33. Jacob Joost, Occidental, $155.90 J. A. Meade, Knight's Valley, $108; Knight Valley, $32. Last fall I was taken with a kind of summer complaint, accompanied with a wonderful diarrhœa. Soon after my wife's sister, who lives with us, was taken in the same way. We used almost everything without benefit. Then I said, let us try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which we did, and that cured us right away. I think much of it, as it did for me what it was recommended to do. John Hertzler, Bethel Berks Co., Pa. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

"My little boy was very bad off for two months with diarrhœa. We used various medicines, also called in two doctors, but nothing done him any good until we used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which gave immediate relief and soon cured him. The tie-up on the Southern Pacific Railroad is a good thing for Sonoma hotel and livery men, as passengers for Napa have to come to Sonoma and stage it the rest of their destination. Stay with it old Hunt! Don't give up the strike boys! Anything for business in this dreary town.

Wm. McElroy, the well-known foreman of J. Gundlach & Co's Rhine Farm, near this place, has purchased the Shubrick Norris farm, two miles southwest of town. The place consists of thirty-four acres and is highly improved. The price paid is said to have been between $10,000 and $12,000 spot cash.

A. C. Abshire, until recently principal of the Sonoma High School, has been elected President of the Sonoma County Board of Education. Mr. Abshire is one of the foremost educators of Sonoma county, and as principal of the High School in this place was considered by the parents of his students a model instructor.

J. S. Young, after being incapacitated from attending to business through sickness for several months, has resumed charge of his horseshoeing and general blacksmithing business on Napa street. He has also engaged the services of one of the best horseshoers in the State and solicits a continuation of the patronage of the general public. See adv. in another column.

The great tie-up on the Southern Pacific Railroad is making business for the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway (the Donahue line.) This system does not use the Pullman cars and in consequence will not be drawn into the railway war. Already a large number of people residing in Napa have been compelled to take the Donahue train for Sonoma in order to reach their homes, which is done by team from this place. Hon. M. M. Estee, Republican nominee for Governor, has been one of the many people who have passed through this place en route to their homes in Napa.

The Schocken basalt block quarries north of town were looted on Saturday night last by a gang of thieves. A large number of blockmakers tools, a new canvass tent and a quantity of blasting powder and fuse were stolen. The property belonged to the workmen employed in the quarries and the loss will be keenly felt by them. There is no doubt whatever but what the thieves are local offenders, as no one but those accustomed to the quarry and its surroundings, which are isolated from the main traveled roads of the valley, could have committed the theft.

THE FOURTH.

How the Day was Observed in Sonoma—The Picnic and Ball Largely Attended.

The patriotic people of Sonoma Valley to the number of several hundred attended the celebration of our natal day at the Pioneer Grove picnic grounds.

The exercises, which were held under the auspices of the Sonoma Valley Band, were both patriotic and entertaining.

At 11 o'clock the assemblage was called to order by Hon. Robt. Howe, President of the Day, who made a neat speech of welcome. A poem was then recited by Miss Claire Hope, there was singing by a chorus of twenty voices of Sonoma ladies, reading of the Declaration of Independence by Hon. R. A. Poppe and an oration by Hon. Emmet Seawell of Santa Rosa. The exercises were interspersed with a number of choice selections by the band.

The oration by Mr. Seawell was a masterly oratorical effort and the gentleman was frequently interrupted by bursts of applause dur-its delivery.

After the literary exercises there was dancing and athletic sports.

Harry Weise of Santa Rosa won the fat mens' race.

John B. Skinner, the young San Francisco druggist, was the winner of the young mens' race.

The small girls race was won by Miss Morris of Agua Caliente.

The three-legged race for boys was won by Masters Valente and Morris.

The tug of war was won by the team manned by Geo. Breitenbach.

The ball given at Union Hall in the evening was attended by about one hundred couple. Mine host Enke and his sister Mrs. Jones of the Union Hotel provided a fine supper for those present, while the music furnished by the band was all that could be desired.

The members of the Sonoma Valley Band, who had charge of the affair, are deserving of the highest praise for the successful and orderly manner in which everything connected with the festivities were carried out.

Death of a Pioneer Mother of Sonoma.

Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Seipp died in this place last Saturday night, after a protracted illness. The deceased came to Sonoma Valley in 1850 with her husband, J. C. Seipp, who survives her, and located in the southeastern suburbs of town, where she continued to reside up to the day of her death. Mrs. Seipp had reached the ripe old age of seventy-four years, and when she died she calmly closed her eyes and passed to that bourne from which no traveler ever returns.

The deceased leaves a husband, three grown sons, J. H. Seipp, Gustav Seipp and Wm. Seipp, and a daughter, Mrs. Marie S. Chase, wife of G. M. Chase of San Francisco, and hosts of other relatives and friends, who will miss the kind and patient old lady.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place last Tuesday, the remains being interred in Mountain Cemetery.

Sonoma Turn Verein.

The Sonoma Turn Verein at a regular meeting held last Tuesday evening elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing term: President, J. E. Poppe; Vice President, George H. H. Cornelius; Treasurer, Geo. Engler; Secretary, A. F. Pauli; First Turnwart, Carl Haderman; Second Turnwart, Geo. Spanning; Janitor, Wm. Wilson. A committee consisting of the following were also appointed to make arrangements for an entertainment and ball to take place on August 22nd: A. F. Pauli, Carl Haderman, Robt. Pasch, George Spanning and Jas. Small.

Big Basalt Block Contract.

S. Schocken of this place, who has extensive basalt block quarries in the northern suburbs of Sonoma, has just closed a bargain with a prominent street contracting firm of San Francisco to furnish them with 600,000 basalt blocks. The blocks will be shipped over the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway. This contract will enable Mr. Schocken to employ a large force of blockmakers and teamsters for several months.

Card of Thanks.

To Mrs. Appleton, Mrs. Davis, Prof. Hugh Maxwell, and all others who so kindly assisted in rendering the cantata of "Ruth" for the benefit of the Congregational Church, the Ladies' Society, under whose auspices the entertainment was given, acknowledge their obligation and extend their sincere thanks. The liberal patronage of the generous public will also be held in grateful remembrance.

A FOOL AND HIS GUN.

Mistakes His Companion for a Deer and Shoots Him to Death.

Now that the open season for deer is at hand the usual number of mistook-him-for-a-deer tragedies will be recorded in the local papers of Sonoma and adjoining counties.

The open season for deer in Mendocino county was heralded in last Sunday by the accidental killing of W. J. Connolly of Santa Rosa by Stanley Meyer of the same city, who with another companion were on a deer-hunting expedition near Ukiah.

The deceased, with Meyers and Westfall, all residents of Santa Rosa, went into camp near Ukiah about three weeks ago. They were in the habit of going on hunting and fishing excursions daily. On the morning of the tragedy Connolly and Meyers started on a hunting trip. Connolly started the dogs into the brush where Meyers had the night before started a deer, and told the latter to go around by a glade where the game might pass in its flight. Meyers followed the suggestion and went to the place mentioned and took his station, waiting for the dogs to start the deer.

A sudden noise startled Meyers, and he thought he saw a deer in the brush, even to the white line on the deer's body. The hunter threw up his rifle and fired. The report of the rifle was followed by a cry and Connolly's voice exclaiming: "My Good, Stanley!" Meyers dropped his gun and ran to where Connolly had fallen on his face. He turned the wounded man over, but the latter had received a mortal injury and expired almost instantly. The white line the hunter saw proved to be the white handkerchief about Connolly's neck.

Political Points.

Joseph McMinn is out for the Sheriff nomination on the Democratic ticket.

John Rodgers is in high favor with Petaluma Democrats for the State Senatorship.

It is now said that Robt. A. Poppe does not want the Republican nomination for the Assembly.

The leading Democratic aspirants for the Sheriff's nomination are Logan Tombs, W. J. Hotchkiss and P. R. Davis.

Ross Campbell has been spoken of by Democrats in connection with the nominations from this Assembly district.

There appears to be no opposition to Lyman Green of Petaluma for the Republican nomination for District Attorney.

T. C. Putnam of Vallejo Township it is said has the inside track for the Assessorship on the Republican ticket.

Sam I. Allen, present incumbent, will have no opposition before the Republican County Convention for the office of Sheriff.

So far the candidates spoken of for the State Senatorship on the Democratic ticket are J. W. Oates, J. C. Sims and J. P. Rodgers.

The Republicans opposed to Mrs. Martin's candidacy for a renomination for School Superintendent are casting about for some one to beat her in the convention.

There will be three candidates before the Republican convention for Recorder, to-wit: Somers B. Fulton of Santa Rosa and E. C. Overman and A. J. Atchison of Petaluma.

The Democratic County Central Committee will meet in Santa Rosa next Tuesday for the purpose of fixing a date for holding a primary election for the selection of delegates to a county convention. At this meeting will also be discussed the proposition whether there will be two conventions held or whether delegates to the State Convention and the County Convention will be selected at the same time.

E. C. Overman, who is an aspirant for the Republican nomination for Auditor and Recorder, has accepted the position as editor of the Petaluma Imprint, which will henceforth be a straight out-and-out Republican paper. The new duties devolving upon Mr. Overman will in no wise interfere with his candidacy for the office which he seeks, and he is still in the field. We welcome the gentleman back to the editorial fold and under his guiding hand wish the Imprint success.

One of the disturbing elements in the coming Republican convention promises to be ex-congressional candidate E. W. Davis' aspirations for the School Superintendency. The dictators smile as they shake Ed's hand, and wink with the other eye at Mrs. Martin's friends. The madam is said to be more solid with her party than she was four years ago, when something of a fight was made against her. She will get the nomination by a big majority, so say the boss and his lieutenants.—Politicks.

SONOMA INDEX - TRIBUNE.

SONOMA, SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1894.

ing when the tricycle started, and about 2 o'clock Mrs. Dumfries was about as tired and as hungry as they make 'em. She called to the professor and asked him to tell her the truth about the time it would take the machine to run down. He told her that, if he hadn't made any miscalculation, she would run till about 9 o'clock that night, but that it was a bright moonlight night, and he thought everything would go well unless there should happen to be a turnpike gate on the road, and it should happen to be closed. At that the widow broke down, and leaning back with her head on the professor's waistcoat fainted away. All he could do was to hold her tight with one arm, so that she couldn't slip off the machine, and to steer with the other hand. Just then he began to meet friends and acquaintances. He afterward told me that it seemed as if there was a procession of them coming up the road, and before they went off into the ditch they all recognized the professor, and he heard several of them say: 'Why, that there ain't Mrs. Van Wagener! Well, I never would have thought it!' or similar remarks, showing a want of confidence in the professor's motives. He tried to call out to two or three people whom he knew very well that the machine had run away with him, but they mostly misunderstood him, and said when they got back to town that Van Wagener had up and told them in so many words that he was running away with the widow.

"Night came along, and the moon came up, but the road was lined with trees, and it was fair to middling dark. Mrs. Dumfries had come to long before this, but she had lost her temper and told the professor he was a brute, and that her brother would settle wtth him for his outrageous conduct. Once a man hailed the tricycle and ordered it to stop, and finding that it would not stop fired three revolver shots after it without, however, doing any harm. Once the machine ran into an old woman, who was crossing the road and was either deaf or blind, but there wasn't very much of her, and the tricycle went over her like a horse taking a low fence. If it hadn't been for the excitement of the ride and the thought of what the consequences would probably be when Mrs. Van Wagener should come to know about it, the professor would probably have dropped exhausted, for he wasn't a very strong man. However, he held out well, and about 9 o'clock, just as the machine was approaching a tavern that stood alongside of the road, the current gave out, and the tricycle stopped.

"There wasn't any other house nearer than four miles, and there was the professor and Mrs. Dumfries nearly 200 miles from New Berlinopolisville, and about as tired, and about as hungry and about as mad as any two people ever were. Of course they had to stop at the tavern till morning, and it took them two more days to get home, partly by stage and partly by rail. When they did get home, the professor found that Mrs. Van Wagener had gone to her mother's, leaving word with a neighbor that she should begin proceedings for a divorce at once, and that the widow's brother had started out with his winchester rifle, remarking to the professor's friends that they could make arrangements for the funeral at once, and that he would send the body on to them at their expense if they so desired.

"The end of it all was that I went to see the widow, and then I hunted up Mrs. Van Wagener and finally explained things so that the professor's wife came back again, and the widow's brother allowed that he was satisfied that it was a case which didn't require any shooting. But after that you could never get the professor to listen to the word tricycle, which was a pity, for in my opinion there was a fortune in that invention of his if it had been properly put on the market. But that's the way with these scientific men. When they make a good invention, they don't know it, and when they invent something that is of no earthly use they spend their bottom dollar trying to get people to take an interest in it."—W. L. Alden in Short Stories.

To Refresh the Tired Body.

After a fatiguing tramp the tired body should be prepared for restful sleep by a careful toilet. If there is no convenience for a plunge bath, the body should be sponged off with warm water containing a few drops of ammonia—if the feet can be left in a foot bath for 10 or 15 minutes, it will be all the better—rub very thoroughly with a Turkish towel, and last of all refresh the face, neck and arms by spraying with rose water, toilet vinegar or any favorite toilet water. Brush the dust off the hair and wipe it with a towel, gargle the throat with salt and water and clean the teeth, and last of all, just before lying down, take a drink of hot water or lemonade. Sweet, restful sleep should follow this regimen and prepare you to awaken on the new day fit, mentally and physically, for any duty or pleasure that awaits you.—Demorest's Magazine.

Guided by the Compass Plant.

"Among the many wonders of the western plains," said Garrett C. Hughes of Boulder, Colo., "nothing strikes the traveler of a scientific turn of mind with more surprise than the 'compass plant.' The leaves of this singular plant are magnetic, and its petals point constantly to the north. These wonderful prairie guides have on numerous occasions proved to be an inestimable benefit to travelers who strayed away from their camp and companions and found themselves lost on the plains. In 1860, while on my way to the Rocky mountains by a wagon train, a party of us, who had left camp on a hunt for antelope, lost our way, owing to a dark and stormy night overtaking us.

"We knew that our train was camped about 10 miles to the northwest of where we were thus overtaken. The night was as dark as pitch, and we were beginning to be alarmed, when one of our number happened to think of the compass plant and its singular peculiarity. We at once dismounted and groped about in the dark till at last our hands came in contact with the familiar leaves of the plant. It was but a short calculation till we turned our horses' heads in the right direction toward the camp, which we had the satisfaction of reaching in about two hours, but not until we had dismounted several times to feel among the leaves of this friendly guide to make sure of our course."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Knew Where He Got His Support.

A Memphis man vouches for the truth of the following election story:

"A number of years ago I was living in a certain Mississippi town. The mayor of the place and myself were boarders in the same house. The mayor was a man who loved his own way, and when election day rolled around a great many people thought that now was a good time to teach his honor that he was not the only man in town. Our landlord of course wanted to be pleasant to his boarder and was profuse in expressions of fealty to his cause. It turned out that the mayor only received one vote for re-election. He came home, where the news of his defeat had preceded him, naturally somewhat disgruntled and out of sorts. The landlord at once began to offer consolation of the sort that is common on such occasions, telling the mayor that he would live to come again and at some election in the future would put his enemies to rout and be triumphantly elected. 'I did all I could for you,' concluded the landlord; 'I voted for you myself.' 'You are an infernal liar,' roared the mayor. 'I got only one vote, and I voted for myself.'"—Memphis Commercial.

Walking Gold Mines.

One hundred thousand dollars' worth of gold placed in the teeth of New Yorkers every year! That is the modest estimate that one of the most experienced dentists in the city made of the amount of gold leaf rammed, jammed and beaten into the molars of the metropolis annually. This means that nearly 100 pounds of the precious yellow metal find a resting place in the mouths of New Yorkers every year.

The gold used by dentists comes in books. Each book contains 15 sheets of gold, beaten as thin as tissue paper. These books cost the dentists $5 apiece. It can be safely said that a bookful of gold leaf represents $100 worth of dental work—or, rather, $100 in charges. It is hard to realize that such an amount of gold is used every year in such a way, but the fact remains. The demand for gold filling is increasing every year. It was expected that aluminium and other metals would take its place, but it easily stands at the head of the list and will continue to for some time to come.—New York Journal.

On the Other Side.

"Have you observed the height of elegance attained by the servant girl lately?' said one woman to another as they rode up town in a Madison avenue car.

"No. What is it?"

"After their 'situation wanted' advertisements they put 'no cards.' Did you ever hear of anything funnier? I suppose that is because they have seen that lovely announcement in marriage notices, don't you?"

"No," answered the other woman. "It's a much more sensible reason. They have learned that mistresses are not above the feminine weakness of reading postal cards not directed to themselves. And they say 'no cards' to avoid letting their employers know that they are looking for work. The joke is rather on the other side from the one which you imagined. Don't you think so yourself?"

And the first woman admitted that she did.—New York World.

The Reason.

Papa—How is it, Alice, you never get a prize at school?

Mamma—And that your friend, Louisa Sharp, gets so many?

Alice (innocently) — Ah, Louisa Sharp has such clever parents!—Liverpool Mercury.

What He Did.

Jack—How did you come out of the game last night?

Sam—I didn't come out. I staid in. Come along and have something on the proceeds.—Detroit Free Press.

CAMPING

Read what the Rev. Dr. J. K. McLean, Pastor of the First Congregational Church, Oakland, says of it:

Hazel Creek, April 14. '94.

* * * I am more than pleased with it—delighted. The place seems to me to embody all available points for a camp—dry, firm soil, good water (the very best), fine chances for drainage, and scenery unsurpassable. The view of Mt. Shasta is one of the very best to be had from any point; it is visible from every part of the ground. The view of the Crags also is fine. The general environment is of the best. It is an oval-shaped amphitheater, three miles long by one-fourth to ¾ of a mile wide, with receding walls two to three thousand feet in height, with lines and shades of beauty at every reach. I doubt if a better place can be found in all Northern California.
